

Automobile Performance Measurements
Applied Data Science and Analytics using Data

Charles Ajax Hulebak

Introduction and Overview

The automobile industry is fascinating, with so many makes, models, years, designs, performance, and a lot of other variables to take into account. There is a significant amount of personality that is associated with vehicles and everyone has different preferences. However, with increasing costs of fuel, we can all agree that regardless of driving a sports car, truck, SUV, or other type of vehicle that we would like to have higher fuel efficiency to reduce our total cost of ownership.

A shortlist of some of these automobile trends include:¹

1. Electric vehicles (EV)
2. Self-driving technologies: using technologies such as radar, sonar, and lidar. Odometry measures detect environmental changes and maintaining safe speeds
3. Automotive cybersecurity: protecting digital systems inside a vehicle, while preventing hackers from gaining unauthorized access.
4. Connectivity & machine learning: emergency braking, entertainment, cyber security while connecting with devices such as smartphones and application services.
5. Improved safety features: emergency braking, blind-spot detection, lane departure warnings, electronic stability control, adaptive cruise control
6. Insurance trends: insurers predicting risk using satellites and datasets.
7. Vehicle-to-vehicle communications: sharing information with other vehicles including location, speed, and direction.
8. Blockchain: sharing data in support of autonomous vehicles. Accessing traffic data to and payment tasks such as tolls, repairs, and insurance.
9. Environmental-friendly cars: vehicles built from recycled materials

As trends within the industry have moved from high performance vehicles to higher efficiency vehicles, this analysis using data science will include two sections. The initial section will analyze Motor Trends historic vehicle dataset which focuses on high performance factors. The next section of this analysis, which will be included within a subsequent analysis will utilize a dataset that is focused on efficiency. Many drivers value both both performance and efficiency.

The performance measures will explore a number of factors to better understand relationships within the data.

Data Correlation

Before we can make any assumptions within this data, let's see which variables had the strongest correlations with another using the Pearson Correlation Coefficient.

This data reveals strong correlations above 0.60 (between -1 and +1) include:

- Miles per Gallon: Rear axle ratio, Engine, Transmission,
- Cylinders: displacement, horsepower, weight
- Displacement: Cylinders
- Gross horsepower: Cylinders, Displacement, Carburetors
- Rear axle ratio: Transmission, Number of Gears
- Weight (1000 lbs): Cylinders, Displacement, Gross horsepower
- 1/4 mile time in seconds: Engine
- Engine: Transmission
- Transmission: Number of Gears
- Number of Gears: Gross horsepower, Transmission, Number of Gears
- Carburetors: Gross horsepower

Many of these variables seem very sensible, such as miles per gallon being related to the engine and transmission size, relationships of engines and transmissions, or transmissions and the number of gears.

Principal Component Analysis (PCA)

Principal component analysis (PCA) provides the ability to understand the structure of the data, similarity/differences, while determining which variables have the a higher level of variance. Eigenvalues and eigenvectors provide the ability to determine how much variance exists in data going in a certain direction, and vectors with the highest eigenvalue are the first principal component. We previously visualized the correlations, now let's take a look at the principal component analysis to visualize the similarity and differences of these factors.

PCA Visualization

The PCA relationships are important to understand and the relationships show similarities to the previous correlation values. We may have considered that miles per gallon were related to the weight of the car, however there is a much higher relationship to the engine size. The horsepower has a much higher relationship to the amount of cylinders, carburetors, and displacement.

This analysis also helps us to understand that the fastest quarter mile depends upon the size of the engine, as it is the nearest dimensional PCA.

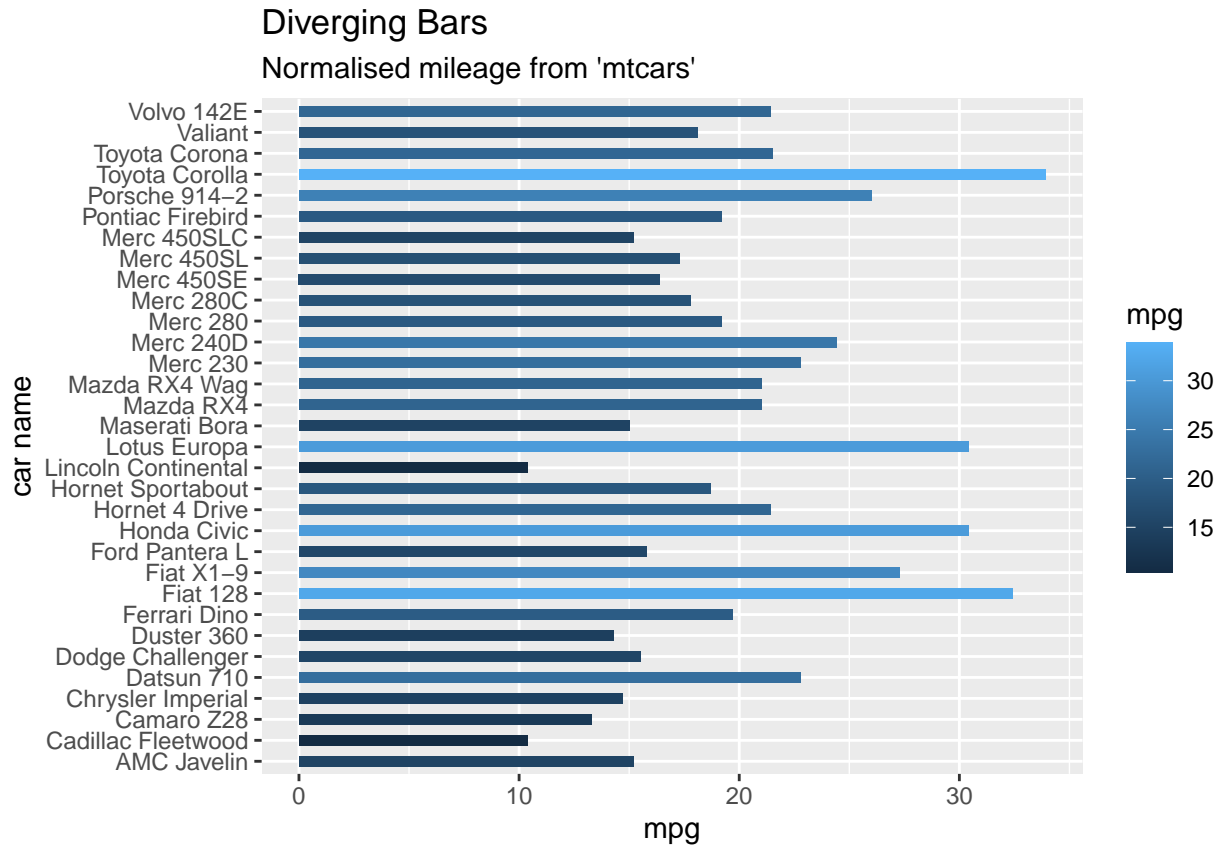

Now, let's see which vehicles within this dataset performed the fastest on a quarter mile.

Fastest Vehicles on the Quarter Mile Tests

This dot plot provides a great visualization to see which makes and models of vehicles were performing the most effectively in quarter mile tests. The fastest four vehicles in this dataset include the Ford, followed by the Maserati, Camaro, and Ferrari.

The final segment of this analysis will include analyzing which vehicles performed the most effectively for fuel consumption, and will also leave us to analyze the second portion of this analysis on vehicles.

In this analysis for fuel efficiency, we can see that the Toyota, Fiat, followed by the Honda and Lotus vehicles were the most efficient.

Further Analysis

This sort-segment of analysis using the built-in Motor Trends dataset was very effective for scaling this type of analysis on updated datasets. Please continue to follow Rpubs, GitHub, and other sources for future analysis.

Using Creative Commons Public Licenses

Creative Commons public licenses provide a standard set of terms and conditions that creators and other rights holders may use to share original works of authorship and other material subject to copyright and certain other rights specified in the public license below. The following considerations are for informational purposes only, are not exhaustive, and do not form part of our licenses.

Considerations for licensors: Our public licenses are intended for use by those authorized to give the public permission to use material in ways otherwise restricted by copyright and certain other rights. Our licenses are irrevocable. Licensors should read and understand the terms and conditions of the license they choose before applying it. Licensors should also secure all rights necessary before applying our licenses so that the public can reuse the material as expected. WHERE A LIMITATION OF LIABILITY IS NOT ALLOWED IN FULL OR IN PART, THIS LIMITATION MAY NOT APPLY TO YOU.
- c. The disclaimer of warranties and limitation of liability provided above shall be interpreted in a manner that, to the extent possible, most closely approximates an absolute disclaimer and waiver of all liability.

- b. Where Your right to use the Licensed Material has terminated under Section 6(a), it reinstates:
 - 1. automatically as of the date the violation is cured, provided it is cured within 30 days of Your discovery of the violation; or
 - 2. upon express reinstatement by the Licensor.

For the avoidance of doubt, this Section 6(b) does not affect any right the Licensor may have to seek remedies for Your violations of this Public License.

- c. For the avoidance of doubt, the Licensor may also offer the Licensed Material under separate terms or conditions or stop distributing the Licensed Material at any time; however, doing so will not terminate this Public License.

- c. No term or condition of this Public License will be waived and no failure to comply consented to unless expressly agreed to by the Licensor.
- d. Nothing in this Public License constitutes or may be interpreted as a limitation upon, or waiver of, any privileges and immunities that apply to the Licensor or You, including from the legal processes of any jurisdiction or authority.
